The Vigorous Language of Dr. Hatcher Offends Them.

RELIGOUS HERALD TALKS

Tells that the Desperate Condition o the School at Bristol Has Made It Necessary to Use Some Very Plain Talk.

the State have expressed great dis-pleasure at the language used by the Rev. Dr. W. E. Hatcher and others in the Religious Herald criticising them for their failure to respond to the appeals to the Virginia Institute at Bristol, now on the verse of a collapse.

In the presecution of his work for relieving Bristol, Dr. Hatcher has had free use of the columns of the Herald, the denominational organ, and from time to time he has given a budget of news concurring the progress of his labors. Along with these batches of news came at odd times appeals to the brethren. As the time limit set by the creditors drew nearer and nearer, and the conditions of Bristol became more and more desperade the appeals grew correspondingly more strenuous. With his usual vigor of style, Dr. Hatcher tried to sifr up some of those pastors who had as yet made no move. No names were called—the criticism was general, rather than specific, but it was at times none the less sharp and stinging. to time he has given a budget of news but it was at times none the less sharp and stinging.

Now some of the pastors are coming back and are manifestly displeased. They foll they had a right to decide whether or not they should burden their churches with collections for Bristol. They didn't like the criticism and they are beginning to say so. Incidentally, at least, one of them takes a hard crack at the General Association. This particular pastor has gone so far as to write to Dr. R. H. Pitt, editor of the Herald, upon the subject.

HERALD MAKES BXPLANATION.

Dr. Pitt has made a reply, not in andiscontented brethren. In a long editorial this week he says:

"In the ardor of our desire to save the Bristol school, we have published from time to time appeals to our brethren to rally to this enterprise, to which the General Association had given its cordial and unanimous endorsement. These appeals have sometimes, as we judge from a letter just received from a valued and esteemed brother, given offense to some of the non-co-operating brethren, because they were accompanied by criticisms of inactive and unresponsive pastors which seemed unnecessarily sharp and stinging. "We have several things to say. In the first place, we have not published one line which, to us at any rate, had any direct personal reference. When we have criticisms to offer upon any individual, we shall name our man. Make no mistake about that!

"In the second place, we have been in an almost desperate undertaking. It is not ours. We really had no more responsibility for it than any one of the hundreds of pastors or of the tens of thousands of laymen in Virginia. It is the enterprise of the General Association. Still, if the Religious Heruld had been slient, or lacking in zeal and enthusiasm, what would the friends of the Virginia Institute have thought of us? We had to do our best, and we had little time for playing the exquisito or the courtler.

Institute have thought of us? We had to do our best, and we had little time for playing the exquisite or the courtier. Doubtless we have not been as careful is we ought to have been, and, while distinctly disavowing any personal reference in any paragraph we have published (except, of course, when the person is named), we wish also to express regret that any line or word published should have given any worthy friend pain. Of course, good and true brethren, pastors and laymen, are fully capable of deciding for themselves what they ought to do in a cage like this, and we do not desire to take this prerogative from them."

DIGS AT ASSOCIATION.

Then the Herald couples a word or two more to this "frank avowal," The minister who complains of the tone of the Herald's articles on Bristol asks: "Must we advecate in careprise because it is wise in the opision of the General Association? We must give account of ourselves, and we must judge for ourselves." To this statement the Herald makes reply partly as follows:

"Of course, the General Association has no authority over churches or pastors. It has not, and ought not to have, any method of imposing its will on churches or Individuals. But the repeated, emphatic and unanimous deliverances of the General Association with reference to the conduct of work whose management has been committed to it ought to have great weight with our pastors and churches. There is a duty of co-operation just as, high and solemn and imperious as any other duty. To be sure in any given case we may refuse, and there is no power lodged anywhere to compel us. Of course, one does not by joining in the deliberations of the General Association sign away his own liberty of conscience. It may happen—as it sooms to have happened in this case—that churches and pastors have already weighty obligations which they must discharge before they can undertake additional tasks. It may happen—as has houbtless happened in other cases—that nor people have raised their prejudices to the rank of conscientious accupies. It may happen that those who have a relish for disorganization and a genius for obstruction are unable to resist the temptation to use an opportunity such as this enterprise has an orded to exploit their liberty to balk or kick. It may be that some are unable to discriminate their personal disilkes from the claims of a denominational enterprise. It may be that some pastors and churches have falled to move from sheer ineria. Let each be fully persuaded in his own mind. To his own Master he standeth or raileth." ment has been committed to it ought to Farmers Getting Together on the Question.

MAY ORGANIZE HERE

Much of the Movement-The Low Prices - The bacco market here and generally throughout the South are provoking a organization has been effected by the planters; it is possible that a similar one will be formed here.

Nearly every tobacco producing State in the South has been organized in this manner and the movement. Strong bodies have been formed in Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and in several other States where cigar leaf is grown.

other States where clear leaf is grown. In North Carolina similar organization is being urged by prominent men, chief among whom is Colonel John S. Cunningham, well known here. '
The purpose of the movement, as stated, is to preserve the tone of the market. The exceedingly large crop of tobacco raised last year has brought down the prices considerably, and at some places complete demoralization has succeeded. The only way to check this downward tendency is to reduce the crop. The only way to reduce the crop is to get the farmers together on the propn, and hence the organization. Some ce tobacco papers are strongly in of the plan. One of them, however to considerable lengths to the planters not to let the polisis get hold of them. DON'T THINK MUCH OF 1T,
Two of the most prominent warehousemen of Richmond were questioned yesterday about the new movement and were asked for their opinion. They stated plainly that they didn't think the organization would ever amount to anything.

Mr. L. B. Vaughan, proprietor of Crenshaw's, said he had seen such organizations come and go. Up to this time they had been anything but successful. His past experience would lead him to the belief that it will be the same with
